WBPL GOES WIRELESS

The West Bridgewater Public Library now has wireless internet. Patrons are welcome to bring in their own laptop computers and connect to the internet. Wireless capabilities are throughout the building and extend into some parts of the parking lot. When a patron needs to use the wireless signal, he simply turns on his computer and connects to the wireless signal named "WBPL". The signal does not require a password in order for the connection to be established. The router has been set up with wireless isolation enabled in security. This means that one computer on the wireless signal can't access data on other computers on this signal.

Mike Aucoin of Charlie's Computers in Bridgewater has installed the wireless technology for the WBPL through the library's courtesy Comcast modem. Wireless inside the building is available during library open hours of Monday, Thursday and Friday from 10-5 PM, Tuesday and Wednesday from 10-7 PM and Saturdays from 10-2.. Wireless is available 24/7 from outside the building. Patrons using the wireless internet through the library's signal are expected to follow the Library's Internet Use Policy. Copies are available at the circulation desk.
